Hello Ms. Antilla,

Mr. Russin will not be providing comments in response to your questions in the midst of pending litigation.

You should be aware that Mr. Russin's deposition testimony regarding his separation from AIL is confidential per the terms of a pending stipulated protective order executed by counsel for the parties, including Ms. Williamson. To the extent you intend to publish the information provided to you that is covered by said protective order, we will seek the appropriate remedy for the same.

Best,

Benjamin Webb

Ms. Antilla, we received your request for comment and forwarded a copy of the same to Mr. Russin. Mr. Russin will not be providing comments on your questions in the midst of pending litigation. However, he takes the claims asserted by Ms. Zinsky seriously, and we are in the position to zealously defend our client's position and bring to light additional facts regarding the plaintiff's allegations via the appropriate legal process.

Best,

Amy,

I left you a voicemail this morning. I spoke with Jean yesterday and she indicated that she was having trouble reaching you regarding the final protective order. Apparently her emails to you had been bouncing back.

Please let me know (if you receive this) if there is another email address we should be attempting to reach you at.

Additionally, I have some serious concerns about your conduct following Mr. Russin's deposition. I have been notified that you have supplied information to Susan Antilla regarding Mike's deposition testimony about his separation from AIL. This is exactly the information that I indicated to you in the deposition was confidential (I even requested the court reporter to make such a designation on the record).

You made representations at the deposition that you intended to comply with the pending stipulated protective order and we relied on those statements in good faith in moving forward with Mr. Russin's testimony. Frankly, I am shocked to see you take these actions in light of our discussions and your execution of the stipulation. At this time, we are considering all available remedies.

I intend to make Ms. Antilla aware of the pending stipulated protective order. Please contact me if you would like to discuss.

Thanks.
